

A woman in a long, flowing white wedding dress is walking away from the camera down a stone path in a garden. The path is flanked by manicured green hedges. In the background, there is a stone building with a dark doorway, trees, and a fountain with statues. The sun is low in the sky, creating a warm, golden glow.

THE MEDITATION CENTER, Since 1915

The Meditation Center was originally the Chapel at the Center of the University of Utah. Since the Center was created as a large part of land on University Park in the center of campus, the architectural and spiritual atmosphere in the building has been a significant part of the University's history. The building was first constructed in 1915, with the addition of a new building, the Meditation Center, in 1975.

The Chapel was one of the earliest additions to the Center, and its original structure was completed in 1915. John and Ruth Shuster, who were the first to purchase the Chapel in 1915, had a vision of a building that would be a place of worship and a place of learning. The Chapel was designed by the architect John Shuster, who was also the first to purchase the Chapel. The Chapel was designed to be a place of worship and a place of learning.
