

REFLECT AND RECHARGE

Guests at Vermejo can now experience the pristine property much like those who live there year-round.

4/Ted Turner

2,000,000 ACRES

SEASON OF SABBATICAL

debuts in January at Vermejo, the crown jewel of Ted Turner Reserves. Voted the World's Best Resort Hotel in the West by readers of Travel + Leisure magazine, the historic 558,000-acre ranch in Northern New Mexico and Southern Colorado offers an array of experiences, including alpine tundra, 19 fishable lakes, and a herd of bison 1,200 strong.

The new wintertime program features a trio of tracks: the Creator's Path for creatives; the Grounded Executive for leaders in business or nonprofits; and the Restorative Reset for anyone who is facing change or burnout.

Guests spend anywhere from three to six weeks at the resort's private cottages and cabins with access to chef-prepared meals, yoga, massage, guided nature walks or snowshoeing, workshops in journaling and painting, plus conservation tours.

"This was driven by our employees, who wanted people to experience Vermejo like they do – well beyond three to four days," says Jade McBride, president of Ted Turner Reserves, the hospitality arm of Turner Enterprises.

"Exploring the property in the winter is just so calming. We want Season of Sabbatical to be a way that people can be touched, changed, and inspired, and to reset for the rest of the year."

—Lisa Martin

"Exploring the property in the winter is just so calming. We want Season of Sabbatical to be a way people can be touched, changed, and inspired, and to reset for the rest of the year."

—JADE MCBRIDE
TED TURNER RESERVES